

CONTRIBUTORS

Irina V. Alekseyeva holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a Professor and the Chair of the Music Theory Department at the Ufa State Zaghir Ismaghilov Academy of the Arts. She is a member of the Dissertation Council at the Magnitogorsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory. She defended her dissertation for the Candidate of Arts (PhD) degree in 2002 while being a Research Associate of the Research Laboratory for the Problems of Musical Semantics at the State Institute of Art Studies in Moscow, and in 2006 she defended her dissertation for the Doctor of Arts degree at the Novosibirsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory. She is the author of the monographic work "The Typology of Basso Ostinato Themes in the Instrumental Music of the Western-European Baroque" (Ufa, 2005). Her field of research interests includes issues of the semantic organization of musical text, as well as those of musical poetics, semiotics and the problem of interaction between the musical text and the performer.

Elena Yu. Andruschenko holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an Associate Professor of the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory. The sphere of her research interests includes the music of Andrew Lloyd-Webber, topical problems concerning the evolution of the Russian musical art of the turn of the 20th and 21st centuries, some of the innovational tendencies of contemporary event management, as well as the management of performing arts.

Irina V. Bakhmutova is currently a research assistant at the Laboratory for Data Analysis at the Institute of Mathematics of the Siberian Branch of the Russian Academy of Sciences. She studied in the Music Theory Departments of the Novosibirsk Music College and the Novosibirsk State University. Her musical activities deal with the spheres of music text analysis and practical application of computer technologies in musicology. A number of her articles has been published in various musical periodicals, including Computer Music Journal, Computer Systems, Problemy Muzykal'noi Nauki//Music Scholarship and The Siberian Music Almanac.

Ekaterina V. Beriglazova is a faculty member at the Choral Conducting Department of the Magnitogorsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory. She graduated from the Magnitogorsk Conservatory in 2007, where she was a choral conducting major, and received her degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) from the same conservatory, majoring in music theory and history. She took part in many international musicological conferences. She has had numerous publications in compilations of scholarly presentations from conferences.

Maxim V. Bysko is a journalist, radio producer, and assistant editor of the international internet music theory journal "Mediamuzyka." He graduated from the Journalism Department of the Moscow State M. V. Lomonosov University in 1995. He began working in radio in 1990 together with his father, radio journalist Victor Kuzmich Bysko (one of the first employees of the youth radio station "Yunost'," the founder of the radio magazine "Sluzhu Sovetskomu Soyuzu"

"I Serve the Soviet Union") and the assistant director of the chief editorial board for propaganda of the Soviet radio Gosteleradio of the USSR). He traversed the path from being a reviewer and producer (of the radio station "Radio Podmoskovia" ["Radio of the Moscow Region"]) to director of the Moscow radio station "City FM" and the Russian radio station "Radio Sport." He participated in founding the radio stations "Govorit Moskva" ("Moscow Speaks"), "Militseyskaya volna" ("Police Wave") and "Detskoye radio" ("Children's Radio"). He has composed over 30 musical works for the television program "ABVGDeika" ("TV Center"), a sound producer in the project "Pushkin's Carriage" (1999), a member of the honorable jury of the Open Youth Festival of the Social Advertisement "Nashe Vremya" ("Our Time") (Moscow, 2013).

Alexander I. Demchenko is a Doctor of Arts, Professor and Chair of the regional Dissertation Committee of the Saratov State L. V. Sobinov Conservatory. He is an active member of the Russian Academy of Natural Sciences, a member of the Journalists' Union of Russia and the Composers' Union of Russia. He is the author of a number of monographs and articles on the history of Russian music, musical ethnography, and methodology of music scholarship. In addition to teaching, he also gives lectures and works as a musical critic.

Elena S. Drynkina is a faculty member of the Music Theory and Composition Department of the Saratov State L.V. Sobinov Conservatory and a post-graduate student at the Music History Department. Her research interests deal with Haydn's symphonies. She has written a number of articles, published in musicological compilations, and has participated in various musicological conferences.

Vera N. Dyomina holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is a senior professor of the Musical Management Department of the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory. Her research interests deal with studying manuscripts and published editions of landmarks of Russian musical art.

Tatiana S. Ekimenko holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an assistant professor (docent) at the Music Theory and Composition Department of the Petrozavodsk A.K. Glazunov Conservatory and a member of the Composers' Union of Russia. She has actively participated in various Russian and international conferences. Her research interests include the music of Karelian composers, contrapuntal aspects in the music of composers from Russia and others, serialism and dodecaphony.

Aram S. Enfiadjian (Aram Enfi) is a composer, music theorist, philosopher and the head of the "Art-Humanitarian Center" in Moscow, an instructor of an original course "sympho-electronic music" at the Department of Music and Computer Technologies of the St. Petersburg Institute of Decorative and Applied Arts, a member of the Russian National Council on contemporary music education, a member of international electronic music festivals, the winner of the first prize at the International Competition “Music and Electronics”, a member of the Jury of the International Competition “20th Century Music”, the author of numerous publications on subjects related to the development of academic electronic music and the chief developer of the concept of “Sympho-electronic music” (SEM). He studied composition and music theory at the Yerevan State Conservatory, and the basics of electronic music in various electronic studios. At the present time, in addition to teaching, he is conducting seminars on the disciplines of “SEM” in Moscow, as well as holding long-distance workshops for residents of other cities of Russia, especially for teachers of electronic music.

Natalia A. Gavrilova holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and Professor at the Department of History of Western Music of the Moscow State Tchaikovsky Conservatory. She has written a number of books and articles in the areas of Czech music, French music and the problem of the national specificity of music. She worked as a visiting researcher at the Paul Zacher Foundation in 1993 and at the Paris Conservatoire Nationale in 1995. Her current area of scholarly interests is 20th century sacred music.

Natalia S. Gavrilova is an assistant professor (docent) at the Department of World Musical Culture of the Maimonides State Classical Academy, an Honored Artist of the Russian Federation, a winner of several international competitions for pianists, a member of the Musical State Philharmonic Society and the artistic director of the Foundation of Spiritual Development “Art for Children.” She has gone on tours throughout Russia and abroad with solo recitals and orchestral concerts. She is presently engaged in performances of the M.N. Ermolova Moscow Drama Theater and the Evgeny Vakhtangov State Academic Theater. A number of articles written by her have been published in Delphis magazine (1996, 1997, 1998, 2007, 2008, 2011, 2012).

Irina B. Gorbunova holds a degree of Doctor of Pedagogical Sciences and is the main research associate of the research methodological laboratory “Musical Computer Technologies” and a Professor at the Department of Informatization of Education of the Russian State A. I. Herzen Pedagogical University. A Merited Worker of Higher Professional Education and a Laureate of the Premium of the Government of St. Petersburg, she has received awards from the All-Russian Exhibition Center (VDNKh) and diplomas from various creative competitions. A set of education programs developed by her has been licensed and implemented into the process of pedagogy. She has written over 150 scholarly works, including seven monographic books, textbooks and tutorial-methodological manuals, digital educational resources, articles in research magazines, etc. She has organized international research seminars and conferences and a member of juries of Russian and international competitions of musical creativity.

Marina V. Gorodilova holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is a professor at the Ural State M.P. Mussorgsky Conservatory, where she is the Chair of the Music Theory Department and a research secretary of the Conservatory’s academic board. Her research interests are focused on harmony in 20th century.

Edward Green, PhD (NYU) has been a professor of composition and music history at the Manhattan School of Music since 1984. He received his PhD from New York University, and his doctoral dissertation dealt with the vocal music of Haydn’s and Mozart’s late periods. An award-winning composer, Dr. Green received a Grammy Award for his Piano Concertino in the category “The Best Contemporary Classical Composition.” Dr. Green is also a Senior Specialist in American Music in the Fulbright Foundation. In 2010, when he was a recipient of the Fulbright Grant, he gave a seminar on the music of John Cage at the Catholic University of Argentina. Dr. Green is an extensively published scholar, his articles dealing with a wide range of subjects, from Guido and Marcabru to Schoenberg and Scelsi. Dr. Green published the compilation of China and the West: The Birth of a New Music (published by Shanghai Conservatory Press) and prepared for publication the soon to be published compilation A Cambridge Companion to Duke Ellington. He is currently working on a new book, Experiencing the Beatles: A Listener’s Companion for Scarecrow Press.

Vladimir D. Gusev is currently a senior researcher and leader of the research group at the Data Analysis Laboratory at the Institute of Mathematics, the Siberian Branch of Russian Academy of Sciences. He studied music theory and graduated from the Moscow Institute of Physics and Technical Sciences and received a degree of Candidate of Arts (Ph.D.) from the Institute of Mathematics SB RAS.

He has written more than 100 research articles in different fields of study, specifically, in musicology and music analysis, which have been published in such magazines as Computer Music Journal, Computer Systems, Problemy Muzykal’noi Nauki/Music Scholarship and Siberian Music Almanac.

Milyausha A. Idrisova is the musical program editor at the radio broadcast service of the GTRK “Bashkortostan” and a post-graduate student of the Music Theory Department of the Ufa State Zagir Ismagilov Academy for the Arts. The sphere of her musical interests is the research of the paths of formation of Bashkir music pertaining to the classical tradition. She is the editor and compiler of a collection of articles about Gaziz Almukhametov, published in 2008. She has participated in musicological conferences and has had a number of publications, including some in research magazines.

Lilia F. Ishmurzina is a faculty member at the Department of Folk Artistic Creativity at the Ufa State Zagir Ismagilov Academy for the Arts and a research associate at the Laboratory for Ethno-Organology. As a performer on the Bashkir folk instrument, the hornay, she has received prizes in international competitions and folk music festivals (in St. Petersburg, Vienna and Jämsä, Finland). Her articles have been published in various musical periodicals, and she has written a chapter in a joint research book “Bashkir Ethno-Organology: History and Discoveries” (Ufa, 2012).

Anton M. Ivanov is a graduate of the V.S. Popov Academy of Choral Arts (2009) and of its post-graduate program. The sphere of his research interests lies in the music of Rodion Shchedrin. He has participated in various musicological conferences, including the Scholarly Conference of Young Researchers (Moscow University, 2011).

Ildar D. Khannanov received a PhD degree from the University of California, Santa Barbara and a diploma from the Moscow State Tchaikovsky Conservatory. He is a professor of Music Theory at the Peabody Conservatory, affiliated with the Johns Hopkins University. His research interests range from the methodology of music analysis and teaching of form to signification of music, questions of pedagogy, ethnomusicology and philosophy. Dr. Khannanov has presented his papers at a number of national and international conferences and has published the results of his research in Theoria, Film Music Journal, Musicalnaya Akademiya, The Dutch Journal of Music Theory, Acta Semiotica Fennica, Sinij Divan, etc. Currently, Dr. Khannanov is the Chief Editor of the International Division of Problemy Muzikal'noi Nauki/Music Scholarship.

Olga Yu. Kijowski is a post-graduate student at the Music History Department of the Saratov State L. V. Sobinov Conservatory, an instructor of organ and harpsichord at the same conservatory and a concertizing organist. She graduated from the Saratov State Conservatory, where she studied piano, and the Hochschule Musik und Theater in Hamburg, where she studied organ, harpsichord and early music. The theme of her dissertation research was “Stylus Phantasticus in the Organ Music of Dietrich Buxtehude”. She has participated in numerous Russian musicological research conferences, and her presentations at these conferences have been published in scholarly periodicals.

Mikhail Y. Knyazev studied at the Specialized Piano Department of the Voronezh State Academy for the Arts, graduating in 2008, and at the Physics Department of the Voronezh State University, specializing in “Theoretic Physics,” graduating in 2009. He studied in the post-graduate program of the Voronezh State Academy for the Arts. The theme of his research is: “Application of Methods of Physical Acoustics to Solving Certain Problems in Music Theory.” The sphere of his research interests includes musical acoustics, the problems of temperament and the correlation between the objective and the subjective in the perception of musical sound. His articles have been published in compilations of research articles and music magazines (including “Muzykal'naya Akademiya”). He participated in numerous Russian and international conferences.

Mikhail G. Kondratyev holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a Professor, the Chair of the Department of Art Theory and the chief researcher at the Chuvash State Institute for Humanitarian Studies. He is a member of the International Academy of Pedagogy, a member of the Russian Composers' Union, a Merited Worker of the Arts of the Chuvash Republic, a laureate of the State Premium of the Chuvash Republic in the domains of literature and the arts. His scholarly interests pertain to the history of Chuvash music, musical education, the artistic culture of Chuvashia, connections between the folk music of various nations, as well as the theory of musical rhythm. He is the author of a number of books, including Chuvash Music: from Mythological Times to the Emergency of Contemporary Professionalism (2007). He is the editor of many compilations of articles and the author of a number of articles published in Russia.

Alla G. Korobova holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a Professor at the Music Theory Department of the Ural State M.P. Mussorgsky Conservatory in Ekaterinburg. She is a graduate of the Ural Conservatory and of the post-graduate program of the Music Theory Department of the Moscow Conservatory. Her main research interests include early music, contemporary music and the theory of genres. She has written two monographic works: The Theory of Genres in Musicology: History and Modernity and The Pastoral in the Music of the European Tradition: An Examination of the Theory and the History of the Genre, as well as a number of textbooks and many musicological articles.

Natalia V. Korolevskaya holds a degree of Candidate of Arts and is an Assistant Professor at the Music History Department of the Saratov State L.V. Sobinov Conservatory. The theme of his dissertation was “The Logic of Formation of Semantics in the Genres of the Vocal Cycle, Oratorio and Vocal Symphony (on the Example of Music by Saratov-based Composers.” Her research interests include the problem of formation of semantics in genres combining music and poetry, conceptual analysis of musical composition, as well as music by composers from Saratov. These themes form the main subjects of her articles, published in various editions.

Svetlana A. Kozlykina graduated from Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory with a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is a faculty member at the Music Theory and Composition Department of the same conservatory. Her monographic work “The Style of Girolamo Frescobaldi” was published in 2009, being the first book written in Russian about the early Baroque Italian composer, based on the material of her dissertation, defended in 2007. Her research interests span through a broad chronological domain, with a special emphasis on Baroque music and 20th and 21st music. Her research articles have regularly been published in various musicological compilations, and her work is well-represented in the Russian and international conferences.

Alexandra V. Krylova holds degrees of Doctor of Culture and Candidate of Arts (PhD) and a title of Professor. She graduated from the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory as a musicologist and from the post-graduate program of the Gnesins' Russian Academy of Music. She has written more than seventy articles about various issues concerning vocal music, music in commercials and art management.

Mikhail L. Lazarev holds degrees of Candidate of Psychological Disciplines (PhD) and Doctor of Medical Sciences, and he is an active member of the Academy of Pedagogical and Social Sciences, a professor at the International Academy of Sciences and Arts, the head of the Department of Children's Prenatal and Perinatal Health of the National Research Institute and the head of the Department for Prophylactic Pediatrics and Remedial Treatment of the Research Center of Children's Health of the Russian Academy of Medical Sciences and an expert on children at the Public Chambers of the Russian Federation. He has over 150 published research works (including two monographic books, programs for children of early, pre-school and school age). The program of formation of children's health developed by Mikhail Lazarev has been approved by the Russian Ministry of Education for use in pre-school educational institutions in the Russian Federation (2003). Over two thousand kindergartens in over 60 cities in Russia work in accordance with this program. He has been one of the initiators of creation of the Russian section of the European Network of Schools for Health Support and the national coordinator of this organization.

Alexander E. Lebedev is an assistant professor (docent) at the Theory and History of Performing Arts and Musical Pedagogy of the Saratov State L. V. Sobinov Conservatory. His research interests include issues of development of musical repertoire for the bayan, interpretation in performance of music for bayan and accordion, as well as the theory of music performance. A number of his research works is devoted to the history of the genre of the concerto for accordion or bayan and orchestra.

Darya V. Logunova is a post-graduate student at the Music Theory Department of the Novosibirsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory and the head of the administrative section of the Musical College, affiliated with the Novosibirsk Conservatory. The subject of her musical research is "Recitation in the Musical and Theatrical Works from the 1930s." She has participated in a number of musicological conferences (Krasnoyarsk, 2009; Novosibirsk, 2010; Kemerovo, 2010; etc.).

Svetlana Yu. Lysenko holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an assistant professor (docent) at the Theory and History of Music and Instrumental Performance Department at the Khabarovsk State Institute for the Arts and Culture. She graduated from the Novosibirsk Conservatory as a musicologist and is currently working on her dissertation for a Candidate of Arts (PhD) degree. She has participated in various Russian and international conferences devoted to issues of synthesis in opera and interpretations in productions in the opera genre.

Anastasia A. Maltseva is a post-graduate student at the Department of Music History of the Novosibirsk State M.I. Glinka Conservatory. She is presently working on her dissertation, "Musical-Rhetorical Figures in Baroque Music: Issues of Methodology of Analysis (On the Material of the 17th Century Lutheran Compositions in the Genre of Magnificat)."

Alevtina A. Mikhailova holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an assistant professor (docent) at the Folk Singing and Ethnomusicology Department of the Saratov State L.V. Sobinov Conservatory (Academy). The theme of her dissertation was "Folkloristic and Neo-Folkloristic Stylistic Tendencies in the Works of Russian Composers for Bayan" (2006). She took part in over 30 intercollegiate, Russian and international conferences and congresses (in Moscow, St. Petersburg, Astrakhan, Saratov, Berlin, etc.). In 2007, 2011 and 2012 she was a recipient of grants from the Russian Humanitarian Scholarly Fund for carrying out the project of "Folkloristic Ethnographic Expedition with the Aim of Researching the Traditional Musical Instruments of the Volga Region, Southern Russia and Central Russia." A number of scholarly articles have been published as the result of her research work, as well as the first compilation of traditional folk tunes on the Saratov harmonica "The Saratov Harmonica is Sounding..." (Moscow, Kompozitor, 2009). She has written over 50 scholarly and scholarly-methodical publications on instrumental folk music.

Natalia S. Mikhailova specializes in ethnomusicology. She graduated from the Petrozavodsk State Conservatory. She is the head of the Department of Research and Presentation of Folklore Heritage of the "Kizhi" State Museum of History, Culture, Ethnography and Wooden Architecture. She has participated in numerous Russian and international conferences. Twenty of her research works devoted to musical culture have been published, including her book about Karelian traditional musical instruments, "Music of the Northern Village," which came out in 2009.

Vera I. Nilova holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a Professor at the Petrazavodsk State A.K. Glazunov Conservatory, where she is the Chair of the Music History Department. She is a member of the Russian Composers' Union, a member of the Russian Society of Historians and Archivists and a Distinguished Cultural Worker of Culture of the Russian Federation. Her research interests include the music of Scandinavia and Finland, the music of Karelia, the national and ethnic aspects of professional music, the areal aspects of compositional creativity and the non-linear processes in the history of western music.

Doctor Dimitar Ninov is a professor of music theory at the School of Music of the Texas State University, San Marcos. In 2009 he was the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the National Association of Composers in the United States. He holds a doctoral degree in composition from the University of Texas at Austin (2003), and master's degrees in theory (1992) and composition (1996) from the National Academy of Music in Sofia, Bulgaria. As a composer and theorist he regularly has his music performed and his scholarly work published. He is regularly invited as a lecturer at international, national, and regional music conferences. His music has been performed in the United States, Europe, Canada, and Asia. His two piano albums, published by the FJH Company and Abundant Silence Publishing, respectively, are being distributed worldwide, and his violin and piano piece “A Lonely Man’s Prayer” has been recorded on the “Made in the Americas” CD series. In 2007 his piano piece Golden Leaves was included in the FJH piano series “Succeeding with the Masters.”

Tatiana V. Novikova is currently a postgraduate student and a faculty member at the Music Theory Department of the Voronezh State Academy of the Arts. She is the head of the Voronezh Section of MoIot (the Young Composers’ and Musicologists’ Section of the Russian Composers’ Union). Her research interests include contemporary piano music and the problem of interrelation between tradition and innovation.

Elvira G. Panaiotidi graduated from the Astrakhan State Conservatory. She received her degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) in Pedagogy from the Moscow State Pedagogical University and her Doctoral degree in Philosophy from the Institute of Philosophy, affiliated with the Russian Academy of Sciences (Moscow). Since 2004 she has been a Professor at the Humanities Department at the North-Ossetian State Pedagogical Institute. She is the author of a number of books, including Plato’s Views on Musical Education, A Conflict of Paradigms. The Western Philosophy of Music Education of the Second Half of the 20th Century, Emotions in Us and in Music. A Critical Study of the Debate in the Analytical Philosophy of Music (forthcoming). Her research has been published in periodicals in Russia and other countries. Elvira Panaiotidi has been honoured with numerous fellowships in Germany and Greece. She teaches philosophy of music at the Hamburg University and at the Hochschule für Musik und Theater (Hamburg). Her research interests include the philosophy of music and music education, aesthetics, gender studies, the analytical philosophy of music, and the Ancient Greek philosophy of music.

Evgeny A. Pinchukov holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and has been an assistant professor (docent) at the Music Theory Department of the Ural State M. P. Mussorgsky Conservatory for over 30 years. His sphere of academic interests is modality (lad) and harmony. In his dissertation “The Plagal Formation of Modes in Monody and Polyphony of the Oral Musical Tradition” (1986) he develops the concept of “plagality” and examines the origins of monodic chromaticism and flamenco harmony. Many of his research texts have been published – among his latest publications were those in the journals Starinnaya muzyka (№ 1–2 (51–52), 2011) and Problemy muzykal’noy nauki// Music Scholarship (2011, № 2 (9)).

Irina V. Polozova – holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a professor at the Music History Department of the Saratov State L. V. Sobinov Conservatory (Academy). She studied at the Novosibirsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory and its post-graduate program. The sphere of her research interests includes issues of Russian music history, musical paleography and the history and singing culture of the Russian Old-Believers. Her most important publications include her articles “The Vocal Musical Tradition of the Old-Believers in the Irgiz Monasteries” (Muzykal’naya Akademiya. Moscow, 2008, № 2) and “The Renewal of the Practices Church Singing in the Old-Believers’ Communities in the Tradition of the Saratov Region in the 18th-20th Centuries” (Muzykovedenie. 2009 № 4) and her monographic book “The Culture of Church Singing of the Old-Believers in Saratov: Forms of Existence in a Historical Perspective” (Saratov, 2009).

Anna N. Pronina is a post-graduate student at the Music History Department of the Novosibirsk State M. I. Glinka Conservatory (Academy). She is engaged in active research of the history of the organ culture of Siberia. She has had a number of her articles published in various music research periodicals.

Natalia G. Protasova is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Performance on Orchestral Instruments of the Kemerovo State Institute for Culture and the Arts. The sphere of her scholarly interests includes the music of the second half of the 20th century and the early 21st century, as well as the compositions of Valentin Silvestrov.

Galina A. Rubakhina is a post-graduate student at the Music Theory Department of the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory and the Chair of the Music Theory Department of Children’s Music School N.3. The main theme of her research is formed by the concertos by Efrem Podgaitis in the context of the evolution of the concerto genre of the late 20th and early 21st centuries. A number of her articles have been published in musicological compilations.

Natalia S. Serova holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an Assistant Professor at the Music History Department of the Saratov State L.V. Sobinov Conservatory. Her research interests are connected with the 19th and 20th century musical culture of Russia and other countries, the philosophical conceptions of the art of music and the music of Richard Wagner. She has participated in numerous Russian musicological conferences (including those held in Saratov, Makhachkala and Ulyanovsk). Her articles have been published in research periodicals and compilations, including Problemy muzykal’noy nauki// Music Scholarship.

Irina M. Shabunova holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is an associate professor at the Music Theory and Composition Department of the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory. Her research interests include orchestral music of the New Time, attempts to reconstruct music of previous epochs and stylistic trends in 20th century music. Her publications include research articles devoted to issues of theory and the history of the orchestra, organology and works by contemporary composers.

Ivan A. Shaposhnikov is a post-graduate student at the History, Philosophy and Art Studies Department of the Novosibirsk State M.I. Glinka Conservatory. The theme of his dissertation is “The Aspect of the Poem in Romantic Music (on the Example of the Music of Liszt and Chopin).” He has participated in musicological conferences in St. Petersburg and Novosibirsk. He is the laureate of a prize in the conference “The Intellectual Potential of Siberia 2011.”

Evgenia R. Skurko holds a degree of Doctor of Arts and is a professor at the Music Theory Department of the Ufa State Zagir Ismagilov Academy for the Arts and a member of the Russian Composers’ Union. Her research interests are focused on various issues of theory, history and style in 19th and 20th century Russian music. A special place in her scholarly work is reserved for the problem of formation and development of various national cultures. She has had over 130 of her theoretical works published, including her monographic book Bashkir Academic Music: Its Traditions and Contemporary Perspectives. Several of her articles have been published in musical magazines in other countries, most notably, in the American magazine Sonus. She has participated in a number of international and Russian symposiums and conferences. Ms. Skurko has been invited as a visiting professor to universities in the USA, Finland and Germany, where she has read lectures on music theory and history.

Olga A. Svetlova holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD), a Vice Rector for Research and Creative Work and an Assistant Professor at the Music History Department at the Novosibirsk State M.I. Glinka Conservatory (Academy). She graduated from the Novosibirsk Conservatory, where she studied at the Music Theory and Composition Department and at its post-graduate program, where she was a student of Professor B.A. Shindin. Her research interests are focused on the singing culture of the Siberian Orthodox Christian Old Believers, the modern practice of church service in honor of the saints, as well as hagiographic cycles in church service. She has had a number of her articles published and participated in the creation of collective monographic work “Traditions of Sacred Singing in the Culture of the Orthodox Christian Old Believers of the Altai Region.”

Galina S. Sycheva (Kozeva) is a post-graduate student of the Music Theory Department of the Rostov State S.V. Rachmaninoff Conservatory Conservatory. She is an employee of the Don State Public Library. She has participated in international musicological conferences in Rostov-on-Don (2008, 2012). She is a diploma recipient from several International Competitions for Research Works by Students in the Sphere of Music at the Russian Gnesins’ Academy of Music (2010, 2011). The sphere of her research interests is focused on Mikhail Gnesin’s activities connected with musical education.

Tatyana N. Titkova is currently a research assistant of the Data Analysis Laboratory at the Institute of Mathematics, the Siberian Branch of the Russian Academy of Sciences. She studied music theory and graduated from the Tomsk State University. She received her degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) degree from the Institute of Mathematics SB RAS. She is the author of numerous articles, including those on musical analysis, which have been published in numerous magazines, including Computer Systems, Siberian Musical Almanac, Computer Music Journal and Problemy Muzykal’noi Nauki/Music Scholarship.

Mikhail S. Zalivadny holds a degree of Candidate of Arts (PhD) and is a senior research assistant at the St. Petersburg State N.A. Rimsky-Korsakov Conservatory. He graduated from the Kiev State Conservatory, majoring both in musicology and composition, as well as the post-graduate program of the Leningrad Conservatory. He has written over 50 research works dealing with the issue of theoretical musical knowledge (including history of music theory) and contiguous musical disciplines. He has participated in Soviet, Russian and international music theory conferences devoted to the problem of the interaction between art, science and technology and the perspectives of contemporary musical education.

Olga N. Zotova holds a degree of Candidate of Pedagogical Sciences (PhD) and is a methodologist and teacher at the N.K. Gusev Children’s Music School N.3 of the city Dzerzhinsk. The sphere of her scholarly interests is connected with the issues of innovative musical education. She has had a number of her articles and methodological books published.

